Agrees to Plead Guilty for Small Fine and Then Ouit the Game.

"The Allen is going out of the gambling business. He has made a solemn promise to District-Attorney Jerome that he would close his poolroom at No. 80 Sixth avenue, which has been raided over one hundred and twenty-five times, sell out his interest in other pool-rooms and gambling-houses and move to his country home in Bay-

The suppose it is a product ternity of this town. The appellation in the workedest man in New York's did not sick to Allen because he was not any more vicious than other men in his class. It grew upon him because of the boldness with which he violated the law against gambling.

He started in the business when he was a boy. The call to arms in the civil war found him with a prosperous randoling house, but he sacrifices his business and went to the front. Upon his return he became one of the institutions of New York.

His pool-room at No. 50 Sixth averue was noted for the frequency with which the police descended upon it. The newspapers kept standing headlines reading "The', Allen's Esidel Assain." Up to about eight years ago Allen with a process of old age caused him to keep in the background in recent times.

He fortified his pool-room, which he called the West Side Club, like a fortifies. There were bars on the windows and an intricate system of signals. Allen was the inventor of the ".cs-box" sheet-iron door which is now used for the protection of many gambling-houses and pool-rooms. This door is composed of two sheets of iron with a heavy twooden door between.

Allen took occasion to-day to deny statements that he had "squraied" on police officers, politicians or anybody else. He said he told the District-Attorney all about his own business, but high not confess that he had ever given tip any protection money.
